NORMAN B. REAM IS

A Country Lad Who Became a Capitalist With Many Large Interests.

FOUGHT IN THE CIVIL WAR

Norman Bruce Ream, capitalist with many important interests, died yesterday morning in the Presbyterian Hospital following an operation. He had been ill but a short time and had been attending to his business regularly.

Mr. Ream was born on November 15, 1844, in Somerset county, Pa. His parents were in moderate circumstances and were of old American stock. He worked on his father's farm as a boy and was educated in the district schools At the age of 14 he became a school teacher. At the same time he was studying photography, then in its infancy, and he soon became one of the most efficient amateurs at this art in

He was 17 years old when President Lincoln issued the first call for volun-Lincoln issued the first call for volunteers for the civil war. He enlisted and served first as a private in the Eighty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteers. He served under McClellan, Butler and Grant, winning a lieutenancy, and was severely wounded in February, 1864, after which he was honorably discharged for disability. Then he was employed. after which he was honorably discharged for disability. Then he was employed for a year in a store at Harnedsville, Pa. He saved some money and was able to start in business for himself at Princeton, Ill., and later at Osceola, Iowa. Afterward he started in business as a grain and commission merchant and was successful.

He soon became a leading figure in the Chicago Board of Trade and his interests grew rapidly. In 1885, having come to New York, he became a member of the Stock Exchange, and in 1888 he withdrew from the commission business and devoted all his time to his real estate and corporate interests.
